

To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing on behalf of the DigitalCommons@Olin repository (<http://digitalcommons.olin.edu/>), a not-for-profit service for the Olin College community that provides access to the full-text of their publications.

Professor    (name)    published in    (journals)    has recently submitted an article for inclusion in our repository. As part of our rights-checking process, I'm writing to see if your organization allows us to use this article. I have included the bibliographic information of the article we wish to post below.

If possible, it is preferred to archive the finalized pdf version as it appears in print. The pdf version has an advantage over mounting the author's own version, in that it maintains consistency in appearance of the article wherever it is read. This also maintains a closer association of the article with the Journal, through the header-title and journal house-style. Each article will include full bibliographic details, a copyright notice, and a link back to the journal's homepage.

I would be grateful if you could contact me to give your permission for including articles published in your publications and to pass on any conditions that are associated. Do we have your permission to use the published pdf version of the article for this purpose? If not, please specify which version, if any, we may post to our site and any associated conditions.

If you do not solely control copyright in the requested materials, I would appreciate any information you can provide about others to whom I should write, including most recent addresses if available.

Thank you for your attention with this--I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

If you are able to grant permission to post other articles not specifically mentioned below, please acknowledge below:

Do we have your permission to post articles by other Olin College authors previously published in this journal/by this publisher to DigitalCommons@Olin subject to the conditions specified above?

Do we have your permission to post articles by other Olin College authors published in the future by this journal/publisher to DigitalCommons@Olin subject to the conditions specified above?
